Boston to test later hours for food trucks

Workin' on our night food. In response to calls from the food truck community, city officials said they plan to roll out a new pilot program.

A yearlong test run kicking off on April 1 will expand hours for food trucks on Boylston Street near the Boston Public Library, Commonwealth Avenue in front of Morse Auditorium and Opera Place near Northeastern University, according to the city's Office of Food Initiatives.

Currently, food trucks in Boston's residential areas may only remain open until 9 p.m., while trucks in more urban areas are allowed to serve until 11 p.m.

The 11 p.m. to midnight time period is a bustling one for night owl Bostonians, which is why law enforcement has hesitated to expand hours.

"It's that time period when people are out and have had a good amount to drink, and there is the possibility of them engaging in an argument," said Edith Murnane, director of the Office of Food Initiatives.

"With food trucks being outdoors, [food trucks] could be a natural magnet for that," said Murnane.

But if Bostonians can behave themselves over the next year, they could be rewarded with an expansion of the later hours.

The pilot program comes as a local Boston food blogger is petitioning for more food trucks in Boston.

Last month, Steven Leibowitz created a Change.org petition asking Mayor Marty Walsh to broaden the city's food truck program. Nearly 300 people had signed it as of Monday night.

While Leibowitz said spots like Downtown Crossing, Fenway and TD Garden deserve food trucks, Murnane said the inclusion of food trucks in those areas is not impossible, but would require a lot of hashing out.

The Downtown Boston Business Improvement District, the Red Sox and TD Garden, as well as law enforcement, would have a place at the table when it comes to making those decisions, she said.

"It's a slightly more complex issue than just putting a food truck in those areas," Murnane said. "But one of the best things about Boston is its civic engagement. I love getting these [petitions]. The more people that give input, the better I'm able to go to the TD Garden or the Red Sox and say, 'How do we go about getting a food truck in this area?'"

Quoted

"One of the nice things about the launch of the food truck season is that it reminds people to get outside. Some of our best times here in Boston are the times that we spend living in the public space."

Deadly fight. Man killed after stabbing near hotel

A man was fatally stabbed after a fight broke out following a large party at a Dorchester hotel over the weekend.

Boston police said the fight at the DoubleTree Hotel on Mt. Vernon Street spilled into the street at about 2:45 a.m. Saturday. Two men were stabbed, taken to a hospital and one of them later died.

Police also are investigating a second stabbing that took place in the neighborhood hours later. Another man died after being stabbed near 744 Washington St. at about 5:30 a.m. Saturday, police said. MICHAEL NAUGHTON

Catholic school drops out of Saint Patrick's parade

Meeting. MassEquality officials met with Mayor Walsh and parade organizers, but no agreement was reached.

St. Patrick's Day revelers.
NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

As discussions between a statewide LGBT advocacy group and the organizers of South Boston's St. Patrick's Day parade continued, a Catholic school from Harvard has decided to drop out because of efforts to make the parade more inclusive to pro-gay organizations.

MassEquality said on Monday that it has applied, as it had in years past, to march in the South Boston parade, and was denied this year. But at Mayor Marty Walsh's urging, a meeting took place Sunday night between the group, Rep. Stephen Lynch and the parade's organizer.

"We made it clear to the parade organizers that we would only march if LGBT people are able to march openly and honestly," MassEquality Executive Director Kara Coredini said in a statement on Monday. "No agreement was reached, but the conversation is ongoing."

At issue is that parade organizers are willing to allow groups to march, but to do so without any signs or displays referencing gay advocacy or sexual orientation.

One group that supports gay rights, the South Boston Association of Non-Profits, said it will adhere to those conditions and will march, according to the Globe. That move to allow a pro-gay group to march led to the Immaculate Heart of Mary School in Harvard dropping out of the parade after participating for nearly 25 years.

Walsh has said he will only march in an "inclusive" parade. Former Mayor Thomas Menino did not march in the parade.

The Allied War Veterans Council, which puts on the parade, won a 1995 U.S. Supreme Court decision that allowed the private group to exclude gay, lesbian and other groups from the parade.

MSPCA saves parakeet that was vacuumed up

Avian accident. The Boston-area bird had to have wing surgery.

Avian surgeons at the MSPCA's Angell Animal Medical Center in Boston saved the life of a Milton parakeet Wednesday after she crawled into a "shop-like" vacuum moments before her unsuspecting owner, Marie Margarone, switched it on.

A spokesman said "Birdie" was violently thrown about in the canister for several moments before Margarone saw feathers flying. The parakeet, which lost blood and suffered a broken wing, was rushed to Angell, where a quarter of her left wing was amputated.

"I'm hugely impressed with this small bird's strength and resolve and I applaud her owner for doing all she could to get her through the ordeal," said Dr. Simone-Freilicher, the MSPCA surgeon.

"Birdie" is recuperating.

ScarJo expecting a French bébé

See more at www.metro.us

Scarlett Johansson, 29, is expecting a baby with her French fiance Romain Dauriac, E! News confirmed yesterday. Not much is known about Johansson's baby daddy. Alternate reports have him as a journalist, the head of a creative agency and an advertising director. Whoever he is, he has excellent taste: Johansson showed off her ginormous vintage Art Deco engagement ring at the Venice Film Festival in September.

Did ScarJo know she was pregnant when she talked with the Daily Mail in December? "I would like to have my own family, that would be nice," she said. "They say it's never the right time and I am sure that's true, but I think you have to plan it like anything else."

Sometimes, Vanity Fair's Oscars afterparty boasts better dresses — and better conversations — than the Academy Awards themselves.

Lady Gaga and Stevie Nicks chatted it up at the magazine's West Hollywood fete. Gaga had a distinctly Veronica Lake vibe in her cut-out gown while Stevie Nicks channeled, well, Stevie Nicks.

America's goofy sweetheart, Jennifer Lawrence, changed out of her Dior gown for this Tom Ford mini. She was later snapped chatting with comedy god Larry David while drinking a glass of white wine. Another comedy god, Bill Murray, talked with Academy Award nominee Julie Delpy. Steven Tyler and a stunning Rita Ora also turned up.

Meanwhile, back on the red carpet, Jared Leto photobombed an unaware Anne Hathaway, and Pink rocked a leather jacket.

Books. A new young adult novel is taking over.

Sally Green's book "Half-Bad" just came out today and it has already been sold in 45 countries, turned into a trilogy and optioned for a movie by Fox.

If you're already completely over "The Hunger Games" and need something to hold you over until "Divergent" hits theaters, this is it.

"Half-Bad" is about a 16-year-old boy named Nathan, who lives in a cage and is being trained to kill. Living among humans are witches, some purely good and some horrendously evil, with Nathan's father being the worst of the worst. To survive, Nathan needs to escape his keepers, find his father and receive three gifts that will bring him his own magical powers.

Bucking the trend of YA novels set in a futuristic dystopia, "Half-Bad" is set in modern-day England. "The book is [dystopian] in a way, but to be honest I never really believed it was going to be published, so my idea was just to write the book I would want to read if I was 15 or 16," Green tells us. "It wasn't in my mind about what the market needed or didn't need."

Green is at work on the second book, which she says is much more daunting than writing the first. "I was in a bit of a panic to get the first words down," she says. "After the first 10,000 words, then I relaxed into it." EMILY LAURENCE

Masseuses at your beck and call

XpresSpa

After what seemed like endless winding through the airport, you made it to your gate — an hour early. Sure, you can listen to Wolf Blitzer yammer on CNN to pass the time, or you can call XpresSpa, which has locations at major airports across the country, for some pampering on demand. Their new mobile stations mean the technician comes to you, whether you need a manicure or a tension-cutting neck massage. In April, the company, which is celebrating its 10th anniversary, will debut two moisturizers, Daytime Anti-Aging and Nighttime Firming, so you can arrive at your destination feeling and looking fresh.

Destinations. This Utah outpost is more than just a film festival hub.

Choose your own adventure in Park City

Trade in the chaos of the city for breathtaking mountain views. / COURTESY OF DEER VALLEY RESORT

With more than 116 trails, Park City has long been a premiere destination for winter sports enthusiasts all over the world. The snow is so powdery, you can blow it away with a kiss. The airport is only 35 minutes from the slopes, so you can be on your skis within hours of landing. And it's home to dozens of Olympic athletes, including new gold medal snowboarder Sage Kotsenburg and silver medal skier Devin Logan.

But even if you aren't an adrenaline junkie, there's plenty to enjoy in this picturesque mountain town. From a surprising number of art galleries, as well as shopping and one of the best whiskey distilleries around, you won't be bored.

Where to stay

There are three resorts to choose from: Park City Mountain Resort, Canyons and Deer Valley Resort. If you want to experience the city as well as the slopes, PCMR is the way to go. The vibe is relaxed and rustic, and you'll be extremely well cared for. The Park City Marriott, part of PCMR, has all the amenities you'll need at a reasonable rate. Styled like a luxe alpine cabin, there's a business center with free computer use and every night, you can grab a Snuggie and head over to the fire pit for s'mores.

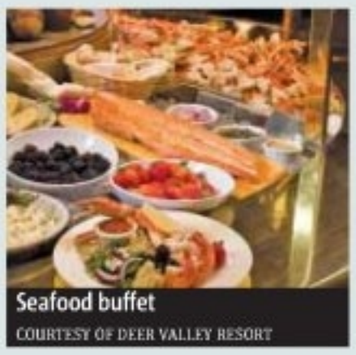
If you're heading to Park City strictly to hit the slopes, check into Canyons resort, one of the largest ski and snowboarding resorts in North America. There are 19 chairlifts and a whole range of terrain on the grounds, not to mention breathtaking views.

If uber-luxury is what you want, you'll feel right at home at Deer Valley Resort — and with condominiums to rent, you'll actually feel like you live there. The St. Regis Hotel sits regally among the mountains and is a skier's paradise: There is no snowboarding allowed.

Fuel for the slopes

Where to eat

The can't-miss restaurant is High West Distillery & Saloon, located right off Main Street. The trendy interior with mason jar lighting and dark wood still bears the bones of the 1870s farmhouse it once was. Sip on the double rye or Campfire whiskey, or the vodka lemonade, one of the most popular drinks year-round. To eat, don't miss the black coffee and bourbon-glazed cod, chicken pot pie and Krispy Kreme doughnuts with vanilla ice cream.



Seafood buffet

For an upscale meal, the Deer Valley Resort's Seafood Buffet sets the mood and will leave you satisfied. Fresh oysters and crab legs are just a couple of options available.

For outdoor adventure

The powder-filled bowls (the city's slogan is "the greatest snow on Earth") and terrain for skiers of every level, combined with easy accessibility, make Park City one of the best places for serious skiers and snowboarders. When you've had enough fun on the slopes, the zipline at Canyons resort will keep your heart racing.

Set aside a couple hours to tour Utah Olympic Park to see where the pros train. The guide will even take you to the top of the ski jumps.

If skiing and snowboarding aren't your thing

Mixed in with the ski gear stores on Main Street are local clothing boutiques and art galleries that keep their doors open late to cater to those who spend all day on the slopes. The last Friday of every month, the town hosts a Park City Gallery Stroll, where customers can meander into the local art galleries for wine and conversation with local artists and store owners.

The world's unstable, but energy supply need not be

Considering presently increasing tensions between Russia and the U.S., we need to be sure there is no threat against the oil we need to import. Venezuela is a source of heavy crude oil but is also politically close to Cuba, which was recently visited by a Russian ship, and Venezuela is not friendly to the U.S. Another source of crude for the U.S. would be Canada via the Keystone pipeline — if President Obama could overcome the paralysis that is preventing him from going forward with allowing a permit for that project. His own State Department has said that studies show the pipeline would not cause any overall increase in greenhouse gases. Business and labor favor the project. Mr. President, which is more important to you: Energy security for the United States of America or delaying a decision for purely political reasons?

GEORGE CHRISTIAN, VIA EMAIL

Originality is not the point of the story

Re: 'Jesus movie. "Son of God" makes you pay to rewatch scenes from "The Bible" miniseries' (Metro, Feb. 28 to March 2) Based on Matt Prigge's jab at Roma Downey and Mark Burnett's movie about the life of Jesus Christ, I am assuming that there is no possible way he watched the entire miniseries. His sweeping generalization about this being a "junk for Jesus" movie is critical in the way of today's dismissive press toward Christianity and all things themed thereof. Having seen it this weekend, it was at the very least an opportunity for nonbelievers to have an understanding of the entire purpose of the Bible, and God's promise to all humanity, if all they do is choose to accept it.

Split finger fastball

Peavy slices finger with knife

Without question, starter Jake Peavy has had the strangest offseason of any Red Sox player. It began with Peavy purchasing a Duck Boat during Boston's championship parade and ended in less desirable fashion as he sliced open his left index finger, on his non-throwing hand, with a fishing knife last Saturday. The fiery righty said that he cut the digit on a fishing trip with his son.

"I promised my little boy I would take him fishing so we went to Bass Pro [Shops] and we bought us some rods and reels," Peavy told WEEI.com's Rob Bradford. "[The injury happened] trying to cut the wire tie that was holding them together. Using the knife with my right hand and holding the rod with my left, and when I broke the wire tire it struck the knuckle pretty good."

Peavy isn't expected to miss much time due to the injury. METRO

IT'S GAME ON FOR 'THE RIVALRY'

Opinion

MATT BURKE

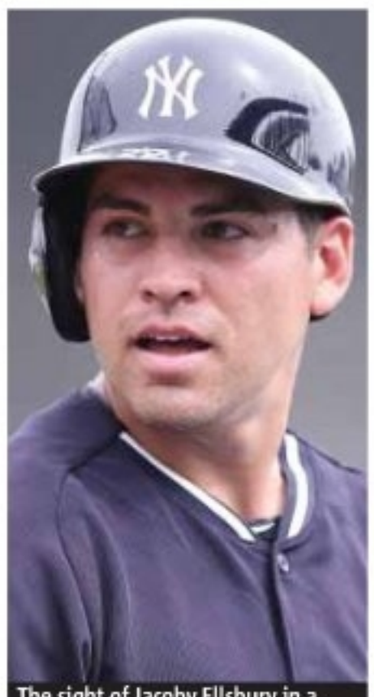
Quoted

Let's be honest: 'Red Sox-Yankees' hasn't been 'Red Sox-Yankees' for quite some time now.

"This could be the year" was one of the more optimistic rallying cries for Red Sox fans every March for the 80-plus springs that preceded 2004. It was all about that elusive crown back then. But after three World Series championships in nine years, the tone has changed a tad, and Sox fans are beginning to get greedy. Sure, they want their October cake each and every season, but now they want to eat it as well. This window dressing is "The Rivalry," and it seems as though executives at ESPN, TBS and FOX aren't the only ones clamoring for a Red Sox-Yankees rivalry revival today. Yes, the fatigue has finally worn off.

Let's be honest, "Red Sox-Yankees" hasn't been "Red Sox-Yankees" for quite some time now. The back-and-forth banter between front offices has not been nearly as prevalent or relevant since George Steinbrenner passed away in 2010. The on-field hatred has been non-existent for nearly a decade — save for that minor incident last August when Ryan Dempster played a version of dunk tank with Alex Rodriguez's torso. The problem there was that Dempster's beanball marathon with A-Rod was celebrated by nearly as many Yankees fans as Red Sox fans at the time.



The sight of Jacoby Ellsbury in a Yankees uniform will be tough for Red Sox fans to stomach throughout 2014. / LEON HALIP, GETTY IMAGES

The 2009 season was perhaps the last time Sox-Yanks felt like "something." Not coincidentally, the Yankees won the World Series that year and the Red Sox fielded a 95-win second place team. But the worn-down Sox were swept in the ALDS by the Angels and another ALCS between the bitter rivals never took place.

For my money, Sox-Yanks hasn't truly felt like Sox-Yanks since 2006. That was the year the Yankees came into Fenway in August and completed a mega-sweep of the Sox, winning all five games of a five-game series. Playing in that series for the Yankees were true hardball heels like Johnny Damon, Jason Giambi, Jorge Posada and Randy Johnson. Likewise, New York fans couldn't stand the sight of Kevin Youkilis, Manny Ramirez, Curt Schilling or Josh Beckett at the time.

Lately, when the Red Sox and Yankees meet, it's been hatred in laundry only. Shane Victorino, Daniel Nava and Koji Uehara may get booed in the Bronx and Lyle Overbay, Brett Gardner, Ichiro Suzuki and Hiroki Kuroda may have been jeered in Boston last year. But those types don't exactly "move the dial," as they say in the biz.

So, one could say that we are due for some solid Sox-Yanks storylines. Fortunately, 2014 will be filled with some legitimate subplots. Jacoby Ellsbury turned his back on Boston and landed in New York. The Yankees, after saying they weren't going to spend big, returned to their roots and spent big. Red Sox fans will be able to walk into Yankee Stadium all summer, saying that they are the defending champions and the Yankees are the ones with a title drought. Derek Jeter is retiring and his last regular season game is scheduled for Sept. 28 at Fenway. Yankees president Randy Levine and Sox CEO Larry Lucchino are even bickering again, with Levine recently saying that Lucchino is "spooked by the Yankees." All is good. But most important, both teams are expected to be good this year. VegasInsider.com has the Yankees at 12-1 odds to win it all. Immediately behind them are the defending champs at 15-1.

It's been 10 years since the last Boston-New York ALCS and it's high time we run it back. Finally, this could be the year.
